

Successful Piggy Adoptions

Hi. I thought pig people would enjoy reminiscing with me. This piece will feature photos with names of each pig. Most amazing to me is that there are so so many pairs o'pigs shown as piglets and adults. This is a testament to the fact that adopting sibling piglets leads to a lasting bond that these super special porcine pals have with each other - and with you! Think about how many single family pig pets are left alone for many hours a day while owners are at work. Sibling pigs have each other to interact, cuddle and play with. Creating a "Pig Room" makes this so easy because you set the space/room up to meet all their needs. Maybe there is even a piggy flap allowing them access to an outside pen. Lots of my two-pig clients have created wonderful environments for home alone pigs. Please enjoy your time with me down memory lane. The names are so darn cute. I'm very blessed to have had such a large number of two-pig adoptions. ~ By Nancy Shepherd

Dulce & Hummer

Hammy & Wilber

Biscuit

Hannah with her Mom

Patsy & Piggy Sue entertaining at a nursing home, pre-adoption grown up

Patsy & Piggy Sue, grown up

Penny & Angel, pre-adoption

Prospective Pig Parents visiting POMH

POMH Little Debbie piglets just hangin' out

Sigmund & Lucille

Sheila snuggling with her canine pal

Burnie, 1st pig child, with Peni, adopted later. Not from same litter but loving each other's company

Spencer enjoying his human